

Highlands Tank Project Update

Update: Construction that was previously scheduled to take place on November 6, 2014 is now scheduled to take place on November 8, 2014.

Project Overview

Denver Water's contractor, Garney Construction, is constructing a 7-million-gallon water storage tank at the Highlands facility. The new tank will be buried but have an exposed roof. The project also includes the construction of a larger detention pond, yard piping irrigation and landscape improvements. The project is scheduled to be completed in June 2015.

Update

On November 8, Garney will be pouring concrete for the new roof of the water storage tank. Please note that this date is subject to change due to weather or other unforeseen events. Please check www.denverwater.org/highlands for updates on this project.

Crews will begin construction at the site on Saturday, November 8 at 6:00am and work throughout the day, until roughly 2:00pm. A smaller crew will remain on-site until about 10:00pm.

The City of Centennial has approved the traffic route for the concrete trucks. Trucks will travel on South University Boulevard and County Line Road. They will access the site through the main gate and will leave the site through the temporary construction gate located on the south side of the property on County Line Road. Staff will monitor both gates to ensure trucks pass safely in and out of the site.
